

I am in full support of net neutrality and I am actually outraged that a roll back on neutrality laws is even being considered. Rolling back net neutrality laws is unethical. The American people depend on the freedom of the internet for career and education as well as personal development. Allowing corporations to have extensive power over that which is essential in every American's life is reminiscent of George Orwell's book 1984. There are huge implications of major population control and has the potential to create much more division between classes in all ways. It will change our country and culture to the very core. We will not be the same innovative America. Even if intentions are good from the start, once the door is opened it will be hard to get back what we may have lost.
